Families Interrupted: Helping Parents and Children Heal After Divorce

Damage from a divorce can be both immediate and enduring. When parents are bogged down in bitterness or embattled over custody, opportunities for children to bounce back get pushed even further away. Join Rocky Spino, an expert on effectively working with children and parents through the traumatic phases of divorce, for this important workshop. You will fully examine the impact of divorce, and confront and overcome attitudes that are obstacles to your clients' healing. Drawing from Rocky's extensive experience with family court referrals, you will take home powerful strategies for helping put the pieces of childhood back together and prevent parenthood from falling apart.

Workshop Highlights

- Dismantle myths that block families of divorce from moving forward
- Create a unifying force when working with moms, dads, and disunity
- Plan therapeutic escape routes for kids in the crossfire
- Help arguing ex-couples become exceptional co-parents

Learning Objectives

- Identify common needs for children in a divorce and strategies for meeting those needs
- Discuss ways of preserving emotional closeness between parent and child after physical separation
- Create secure pathways for kids when households split apart
- Summarize how to help parents transform post-marital tensions into mutual child raising
- Develop ways of managing professional challenges when facing divorce and custody disputes

Rocky Spino, M.S., NCC, LPC brings expertise, experience, and insight drawn from counseling hundreds of families for nearly twenty years. He is devoted to helping parents and children put the pieces back together, from painful divorces to high risk teen behavior. As a licensed professional counselor specializing in child therapy, Rocky has built a highly reputable and successful practice in Central Pennsylvania. His extensive media experience and mental health work with children have combined to make him a highly qualified expert in his field.

Rocky sees a full caseload of young clients in his private practice, is an adjunct professor of counselor education at McDaniel College in Maryland, and regularly reaches out with his informative programs for parents, teens, and professionals. He has been a contributing writer for a number of print and online parenting magazines, provided ongoing expert commentary on the Jon & Kate Plus 8 story, and been interviewed on the Michael Jackson child custody case for both print and broadcast media. Rocky has also appeared on talk shows nationwide on issues pertaining to childhood and parenting. For further information, you may visit his web site: www.rockyspino.com

“Rocky’s enthusiasm and passion for helping children, adolescents and families captures the attention of all. Rocky was able to keep parents engaged throughout the whole presentation and left participants with valuable information that they could utilize day to day.”

Special Evening Program

Providers: Do you have parent clients that are struggling with divorce and shared custody? Has cooperative parenting for them been replaced with contempt, high conflict, and children trapped in the crossfire? Please tell them about the evening parenting portion of this program. Parents can gain powerful ideas and inspiration on how to come back to their senses and get back to the shared upbringing of their child.

When: The evening of each workshop from 7:00- 9:00 p.m

Where: Same location as each workshop (see registration panel)

Cost: $39 per person

Reservations: Call 888.992.9199 or visit www.ceuregistration.com
